DALLAS (Jan. 29, 2026) — Strong demand across Texas is fueling new leadership momentum at Brasfield & Gorrie, where three experienced builders are stepping into new roles as they guide one of the company's fastest-growing regions. Jason Weeks has been promoted to regional president, Susan Stabler has been named senior vice president, and James Cohran now serves as executive vice president of field operations.

Weeks leads strategy and operations across the Texas region, bringing a forward-thinking mindset shaped by 20 years with the company. He has spent the past decade guiding the Dallas office, where his precision and people-first leadership have helped accelerate the region's growth. Weeks has served as chair of the TEXO building association. His background spans commercial, hospitality, healthcare and mission critical market sectors. He pairs that experience with a clear focus on innovation and disciplined execution—an approach grounded in doing the small things exceptionally well.

Stabler brings broad experience across healthcare, mission critical, commercial and industrial markets. She helped strengthen Brasfield & Gorrie's healthcare portfolio in Birmingham, Alabama, before relocating to Dallas to support expanding client needs across the state. She also founded the company's Operational Women's Network and continues to champion growth opportunities for women in construction.

Cohran oversees field operations across the Texas region. With more than 20 years of hands-on experience in self-performing concrete structures, he has led teams on high-profile industrial, commercial, healthcare and mission critical projects, including Omni PGA Frisco resort and multiple projects for HCA Healthcare. He applies that field perspective to support Texas teams with precision and accountability.

"Jason, Susan and James are result-oriented leaders who know how to bring people together and get the work done the right way," said Brasfield & Gorrie CEO Rob Blalock. "They've earned the trust of our teams and our clients. Their leadership reflects our long-term commitment to Texas and the relationships we're building here."

Weeks said the opportunity reflects the company's confidence in its Texas teams. "Across the state, clients hold us to a high standard—and our teams rise to it," he said. "We've built steady momentum by developing people, sharpening our technical expertise and staying attuned to the needs of our clients. I'm grateful for the chance to help our region continue to grow with purpose."
